

January 21, 2020

<https://www.timeout.com/newyork/bars/best-non-alcoholic-cocktails-new-york-city>

Where to drink non-alcoholic cocktails in New York City

New York bars offer more thirst-quenching mocktails and creative non-alcoholic drinks than ever before

By Bao Ong | Posted: Tuesday January 21 2020

Photography: Minu Han

In 2020, non-alcoholic cocktails have become a staple across many of New York's best bars and restaurants. The new wave of drinks gracing menus all over are no longer just kids' mocktails or overly sweet concoctions made to help those of us taking part in Dry January. Bartenders have taken care to create more nuanced libations with quality ingredients and created recipes that are just as intricate as many classics. Whether you're sober or simply looking to take a night off from imbibing, the options are better than ever.

TimeOut.com/NewYork
Monthly Unique Visitors: 17,000,000

Best Mocktails at NYC Bars

Photography: Courtesy of The Well

The Well Kitchen & Table

Walking into The Well Kitchen & Table makes you want to join this chic wellness club with its options for everything from restorative body treatments and to meditation sessions. The restaurant is open to the public, however, and the non-alcoholic drinks pair excellently with the seasonal, vegetable-forward menu. We recently tasted the Cucumber Kick, a hydrating mix of fresh cucumber juice with lime and ginger.

Read more