Still Searching For Hand Sanitizer? These 12 Are Still In Stock (& They Come From Our Fave Beauty Brands)

Staying home, wearing masks when making essential grocery runs and washing hands with warm soapy water for at least 20 seconds are little things we can do to protect ourselves and others against COVID-19. But sometimes sudsing up isn't possible (like when you're mid-grocery run), and that's when hand sanitizer comes in, well, handy. While traditional germ-fighting brands like Purell are out of stock and being resold on eBay for hundreds of dollars, some beauty brands have shifted production to meet demands, support their small businesses and give back to the community in need. Here, shop 12 hand sanitizers from beauty brands that are in stock—and feature the CDC's recommendation of 60 percent alcohol.

THE WELL

12. THE WELL CLEAN HANDS MOISTURIZING SANITIZER

We all need hand sanitizer right now, but The Well wanted to make one that we'd actually want to use. And that's how Clean Hands Moisturizing Sanitizer was born. It's both WHO and FDA-approved with a base of 80 percent alcohol, but it's also infused with sustainably sourced, wildcrafted essential oils with antimicrobial and mood-supporting properties (think ylang ylang, bergamot mint, cedarwood and geranium).
